CORNELL LAW SCHOOL

The Boardman Prize, awarded annually to the student who, in the judgment of the faculty, has done the best work to the end of the second year, was awarded to Donald W. Large.

The first and second Frazer Prizes, awarded to the students elected by the third-year class from recommendations by the faculty, on the basis of high qualities of mind and character, were given to Paul A. Crotty and Tyrone Brown, respectively.

The Louis Kaiser Prize, given to the student judged by the faculty to rank highest in the Moot Court work at the end of the second year, was awarded to James B. Weidner.
